ONE DEAD AND ONE DYING RESULT OF MUSHROOM POISON

DELICACY FATAL TO MEMBERS OF JANSKY FAMILY

TWO NARROWLY ESCAPE DEATH

Husband of Dying Woman Stricken But Recovers—Husband of Dead Woman Didn't Partake of Food

Mrs. Bartl Jansky, aged 66, 1231 Johnson street, is dead and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Frank Jansky, same address, is dying at the Lutheran hospital from poisoning believed to have resulted from eating toadstools in a mess of mushrooms, picked Wednesday by Frank Jansky, son of the dead woman and husband of the dying woman.

Frank Jansky was stricken soon after partaking of the food but recovered while Bartl Jansky, his father, probably owes his life to the fact that he is not fond of the delicacy and declined to partake of it at supper Wednesday.

According to Jansky's story to The Tribune today he and two other men, whose names he declines to give out, picked the fungus in a grove of trees south of the city. It had been his custom in the past to gather mushrooms in the identical spot where the fatal collection was secured.

Prepared For Supper

The mess was taken to the home of his father, Bartl Jansky, where he and his wife reside, and the elder Mrs. Jansky prepared them for supper. All of the family partook of the food with the exception of Bartl Jansky.

Ten hours later Mrs. Bartl Jansky was taken violently ill and rushed to the Lutheran hospital. Soon after her daughter-in-law was attacked. The poison then started to work on Frank Jansky and the three occupied hospital beds.

Dr. C. H. Marquard was called and he with Dr. C. Christiansen used every means known to the medical profession to save the lives of the stricken people. Jansky's robust physical condition is probably responsible for his cure. The fight against death has been kept up continually since they were stricken, but the heroic efforts of the physicians were futile, Mrs. Bartl Jansky succumbing at 9:45 last night.

Today Mrs. Frank Jansky is unconscious and according to Dr. Mar-

CANNOT LEGALLY EXTRADITE THAW

NOT FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE

Only Insane Patient and He is Legally Unsound Mentally Only In New York

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Federal officials, prominent lawyers in congress, and government alienists today declared that Harry Thaw cannot legally be extradited from any state or foreign country. Any state or foreign country in which he takes refuge, they declared, can prosecute him as a dangerous criminal, but they could not return him legally to New York. Any foreign country, they said, could refuse to let him enter on the grounds of his being "undesirable."

Absolutely Safe

"Thaw is absolutely safe in another state of a foreign country, from action by the New York officials," declared Immigration Inspector O'Donnell today.

New York authorities, all officials here agreed today, are powerless to get Thaw's return. They cannot issue a "requisition" because Thaw is not a fugitive from justice, having been acquitted of murder and being merely in "insane patient."

State department officials said that it was doubtful if any foreign nation would honor a requisition from this government for Thaw's return. The department would be powerless to issue a formal "requisition." It could merely "request" such a course and its authority even to make such a request is doubtful.

Gone Forever

Dr. Benjamin R Logie, for years the gavernment's "insanity expert" here said: "Thaw cannot be returned. He is gone forever if he is out of New York. He is not insane in any other state and is at perfect liberty except in New York. He has committed no act by escaping for which he can be arrested in any other state or country. It looks to me like Thaw is free except he will be debarred from scintillating along "The Great White Way."

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Assistant District Attorney Wascervogel, who is acting district attorney of New York county in the absence of District Attorney Charles S. Whitman today stated that while Harry K. Thaw is not subject to extradition, the authorities of any state can arrest Thaw on sight as a dangerous character.

BAKERY ROMANCE ENDS

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 18.—Because Edmund Human, 25, had an overwhelming appetite for the jelly tarts that A. J. Moder baked and through this sweetened agency fell passionately in love with fair Lillian, the 19 year old daughter of Baker Moder, Edmund is today sequestered in a cell on charges of wife abandonment and Lillian is planning to again serve juicy confections at the Moder bake shop. For it seems that when Edmund and Lillian eloped one moonlight night last June, Lillian left her tarts and parents, but Edmund left a wife and two small children. The police located the couple in St. Paul.

PANIC ON LAKE BOAT

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Five hundred passengers on board the steamer City of Holland, nearing Benton Harbor, Mich., fled to the deck in a panic when a rumor spread that the ship was on fire. Clouds of smoke pouring from a stateroom and cries of "Fire" from a startled passenger caused the panic. Ship officials declared today that a man who suddenly went insane on board the ship, dropped a lighted cigarette and started the fire scare. The man was turned over to the Benton Harbor police when the boat docked here.

PEACE PLAN PUT BEFORE PRESIDENT

Wilson Project is Laid Before Huerta and Answer is Expected Today

FEELING IS VERY POSSIMISTIC

Even Administration Admits That the Outlook Is Doubtful

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Administration officials expected to hear from Mexico City this afternoon whether or not President Wilson's suggestion for a settlement of the Mexican trouble has been accepted or rejected by President Huerta. That the suggestions have been laid before the Mexican executive was officially confirmed today.

The feeling as to the solution of the Mexican situation today was decidedly pessimistic. The administration is awaiting and the outlook is admitted to be doubtful. Senator Bacon, chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations, who saw the president today, left the White house declaring that if the negotiations in Mexico City today, left the White house declaring that if the negotiations in Mexico City fail, this government will have at least shown the world that it has been willing to try every peaceful means to bring about a solution of the difficulty.

Huerta Favors Britons

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Taking advantage of the refusal of this government to recognize President Huerta, British interests in Mexico, it became known here today, have obtained from President Huerta a giant railroad concession, which threaten to cripple the American-Hawaii steamship company and other American enterprises in Mexico.

While the state department, refuses absolutely to discuss the matter and officially denied any knowledge of the transaction, it is known that the department has been making quiet inquiry and has amassed considerable data. It is reported the concessions are in some way mixed up with the prompt recognition which England gave to the de facto government of President Huerta.

Not only have the concessions been actually granted, but it is reported here that the intereests obtaining them have made their first payment for the grant to the Huerta government.

FRATERNAL MEN MEET

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—A coalition of the national fraternal congress and the associated fraternities of America, national bodies representing in all six million members of fraternal societies, was the object of the convention of each when their meetings opened here today. About 300 delegates are attending. They represent among other lodges the Macabees, Woodmen of the World, Modern Woodmen, Royal Arcanum, American Insurance Union, Ben Hur, Heptasophs and the Yeomen.

HOME INSTINCT DISASTROUS

RACINE, Dis., Aug. 18.—Michael Stainas of Oakwood, Wis, lies at a local hospital with a big deep gash in his head, his left shoulder fractured and his right ankle wrenched, in addition to numerous bruises, because he jumped from an express train on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway that did not stop at his station, and he was bound to get home. He is not expected to live.

RAIN HALTS NET STARS

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 18.—Prospects for the opening matches in the all-comers tennis tournament on the Casino courts, which brings together the greatest stars in the country, and which will be the crowning event of the year in the tennis world, were rather dubious today, with a light but steady rain falling and the courts not in the best of condition.

BABY BURNS IN BED

MILTON JUNCTION, Wis., Aug. 18.—Ruby Stone, two years old, was burned to death in her bed last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Dix. The fire was not discovered until after the child was dead. It is thought that the baby found matches and was playing with them when she set fire to the bed.

HORSE KILLS MAN

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—A frightened horse that dashed madly through the State street shopping district at lunch hour today, ran upon the sidewalk and trampled Charles Zandecki, 27, so badly that he will die. During his flight the horse collided with a delivery wagon and was killed.

CAR COMPANY AND LIGHT FIRM RIVALS FOR CITY CUSTOM

Wisconsin R. L. & P. Company Would Sell Power for Pump Station Crane

GAS AND ELECTRIC BLOCKS MOVE

Put Own Wires Out so That Commission Will Refuse Right to Sell Power

POWER WAR FORESEEN BY MANY

Believed Hatfield Concern Wants to Get Footing to Sell Current Here

That the Wisconsin Railway Light and Power company is seeking a franchise to retail electric current in the city of La Crosse is the claim made today by certain citizens following the offer of General Manager Peter Vaner to furnish electric power for the operation of the crane at the new pumping station at Myrick Park.

The move on the part of the W. R. L. & P. company was not welcomed by the La Crosse Gas & Electric company who immediately started a race to hurry their own lines to the new plant and be in a position to offer current to the city this morning. The work was all done Sunday under the personal direction of Thurston Owens, general manager of the gas and electric company.

Must See Commission

To further check any attempt of the W. R. L. & P. company to get into the lighting field here the gas company, through its attorney, A. E. Lees, informed the special water committee of the common council, at a meeting this morning, that the other utility must first secure a certificate of convenience and necessity from the railroad commission of Wisconsin before doing business. The street car company has been ordered by the rate commission, it is claimed today, not to retail power until given permission by the commission.

Recently the gas and electric company submitted a proposition to the city for the furnishing of power at the new pumping station. Their original bid called for $1400 for installing the poles and lines to the new plant and getting conditions in shape to serve the current if desired by the city. There were also various figures submitted for temporary use of the current and regular use. The special water committee thought the figures too high and declined the proposition. Later Mr. Owens made a verbal proposition the figures being much less than those originally submitted, it is said.

Valier Submits Plan

In the meantime, Peter Valier, general manager of the local traction company, submitted a plan for running wires from the street car line, through Myrick Park, to the plant, announcing that he would furnish the current for the operation of the crane—used in the erection of the building—and for other temporary purposes for a sum of approximately $100. The proposition was well received by the council committee who told Valier to proceed with the installation.

The street car company's power comes from the dam at Hatfield and the current is direct while the crane motors were designed for alternating current. Transformers were ordered, however, and Valier, after securing permission from the telephone company, proceeded to string wires on the 'phone company's poles to the plant.

In the meantime Thurston Owens of the gas and electric company, learned of the plan and "got busy."

Rush Work Sunday

Early Sunday morning a crew of men was on the ground and by evening poles, wires and everything else needed to conduct current were in place. The move was to eliminate the possibility of the W. R. L. & P. company setting up, in a petition to the rate commission for the right to operate here, that there was "necessity" for another company. With the gas and electric current at the door of the water plant there would be no grounds for granting permission to another company to retail current.

At the meeting of the council special committee this morning, Mr. Valier declared that his only purpose in making the proposition was to accommodate the city—that his company had no intention of trying to enter the light field here.

That that was not the street car company's real intention is the general belief about town today. It is pointed out that the company controlling the local traction company has an abundance of horsepower to spare at their Hatfield plant and that they undoubtedly want La Crosse as a field to dispose of this.

The order of the railroad commission this morning precludes all possibility of the car company furnishing power to the city for some

HARRY K. THAW

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—"It is certain that Harry Thaw will return to all the vices to which he was addicted before his incarceration," said Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald, who testified as a state expert witness in the Thaw habeas corpus proceedings at White Plains in July, 1912.

"There is no doubt whatever that Harry Thaw will return to use of drink and drugs to moral perversions," declared Dr. MacDonald today. "Thaw is incurably insane. His disease is progressive. The moment he takes a drink of whiskey or wine he will at once become irresponsible and his diseased mind will at once revert to the delusions of persecutions which he cherished before he slew White and many times since then. He is likely at any time, in such a state, to single out one of these persons who he believes has wronged him and attempt violence."

THAW IS SPOTTED BY HOTEL-KEEPER

Police of Pittsfield, Mass., Hot on Trail of Man Believed to Be Fugitive

AUTO LIKE CAR OF THE ESCAPE

Descriptions Given Fit Both Thaw and Auto in Which He Got Away

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Aug. 18.—While the police of Boston and every town in Massachusetts were being warned to look out for a big black touring car, the police here today were in pursuit of two men who left the Hotel Lenox, at Lenox, Mass., before breakfast, one of whom was positively identified by Richard A. Stanley, proprietor of the hotel, as Harry K. Thaw.

The description of the man fits Thaw and the automobile is exactly like the high powered car in which Thaw made his escape yesterday.

A man came to the hotel late yesterday evening and registered as "Dr. Holden, New York." He asked for a room for himself and his 'chaufeur." Later the automobile and the "chauffeur" appeared and Stanley at once recognized him as Thaw. He registered as "P. H. Lewis," New York.

The automobile was placed in a garage and the men went to their room. Stanley did not tell his story to the police until today and then it was discovered that "Holden" and "Lewins" had left the hotel without breakfast, speeding away toward Boston in a big black car.

The automobile in which Thaw made his escape from Matteawan was positively identified as a Packard, while the car which Dr. Holden and "Lewis" had here was a Palmer-Singer. A dispatch from New York said that Dr. R. B. Holden of that city has a Palmer-Singer automobile in which he is now touring, and that this led the authorities to doubt Stanley's identification of Holden's chauffeur as Thaw.

THAW'S ESCAPE DAMAGES SULZER

Friend and Appointee of New York's Impeached Governor Reports to Glynn

TAXPAYERS WANT A SETTLEMENT

May Work Up Test Case to Decide Who Has Executive Authority

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 18.—State Supt. of Prison John B. Riley, intimate friend and appointee of Governor Sulzre, today recognized Lieutenant Governor Martin H. Glynn as acting governor of the state. Riley telegraphing from Plattsburg, reported to Glynn the facts in the connection with the escape of Harry K. Thaw from Matteawan. Shortly afterward, Dr. Kieb, superintendent of Matteawan called McGlynn on the telephone with a similar report. Both officials simply related the already known facts in the case.

The next forty-eight hours will decide whether the confusion of a dual governor system with consequent indescribable confusion in the state's business, is to continue or whether there is to be a lull pending the impeachment trial of William Sulzer.

It was expected that a taxpayers action of some sort would be started which would get the Sulzer and Glynn qualifications before the court. One of the methods under consideration was to have one of the local banks refuse to honor a check signed by one of the two men and then have application made to the court to compel it to. The resultant action would raise exactly the question now in dispute, just who is head of the state government.

A report that the Frawley committee of which Senator Frawley is the dominant spirit, plans to probe the rumor of Mrs. Sulzer's stock speculative deals in advance of the impeachment trial, has resulted in adding to the bitterness among Sulzer's friends. They today denounced such a plan, insisting that its adoption would mean that Tammany wanted to get a line on the Sulzer defense to lay plans to inpeach it.

RUNS PAST MAN AT GATE---JUMPS INTO BIG AUTO

Dashes at Seventy Miles an Hour Out of New York State and Safely Into Connecticut

IS SAFE FROM RETURN TO ASYLUM

Laws Prevent His Extradition and He is Free Outside of New York

REPORTED FROM ALL NEW ENGLAND

Every Town in Eastern Part of Country on the Lookout for Big Black Touring Car

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Harry K. Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, escaped from the hospital for the criminal insane here at 7:35 Sunday morning. A dart for liberty through an open gate, a dash into the open door of a powerful automobile that stood quivering outside, and a flight like a rocket for the Connecticut state line, thirty miles away, accomplished his escape.

At the Hothed Gotham it was stated for Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw this afternoon that she had received a letter from Thaw this afternoon dated Danbury, Conn., in which Thaw said he planned to take a rest before going to Elmhurst, Pa.

Had Five Aides

Five confederates manned the car in which Thaw escaped and a big black limousine which trailed it past the asylum gate. The police have their license and names under which they registered at a local hotel on Friday night and are seeking them.

A reward of $500 for Thaw's apprehension has been offered by Dr. R. F. C. Keib, superintendent of the asylum. Howard H. Barnum, the attendant at the gate past whom Thaw flashed in his break for freedom, is under arrest, and other arrests are expected to follow in the rigid investigation begun.

Planned Early Flight

The shades were drawn in the dormitories and the inmates were asleep when Thaw left his room on Sunday morning. He was fully dressed. The milkman's cart was rumbling on the road outside as he walked through the storeroom and into the outer courtyard of the grounds. Barnum, sole attendant at the road gate, was pacing back and forth when Thaw closel the storeroom door behind him, and apparently did not grasp the significance of Thaw's early rising.

Long years of residence at the asylum and repeated declarations by Thaw that he would never attempt to obtain his freedom except by legal means has established the madman's status as a "trusty." There was little out of the ordinary in his appearance, even at so early an hour, in the courtyard and if Barnum saw him—as to this no one, save the hospital authorities, could say and they refused to talk—he raised no question.

Autos Await

A six cylinder touring car, of sixty horsepower, followed by a limousine, also black, loafed lazily along the road as the milkman drew near the gate. Thaw, standing a few feet away, apparently unconcerned, waited till Barnum unlocked the gates and swung it wide to let the milkman enter. At the same moment

Mother Rejoices

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, mother of Harry K. Thaw and Mrs. George Carnegie, his sister, did not make their intended visit to Matteawan today. They arrived in New York last night, saying they expected to visit Thaw in the asylum today. The white-haired mother, almost 70 years old, openly rejoiced that her son had gained his liberty at last, but declared positively that she knew nothing about it and did not aid him.

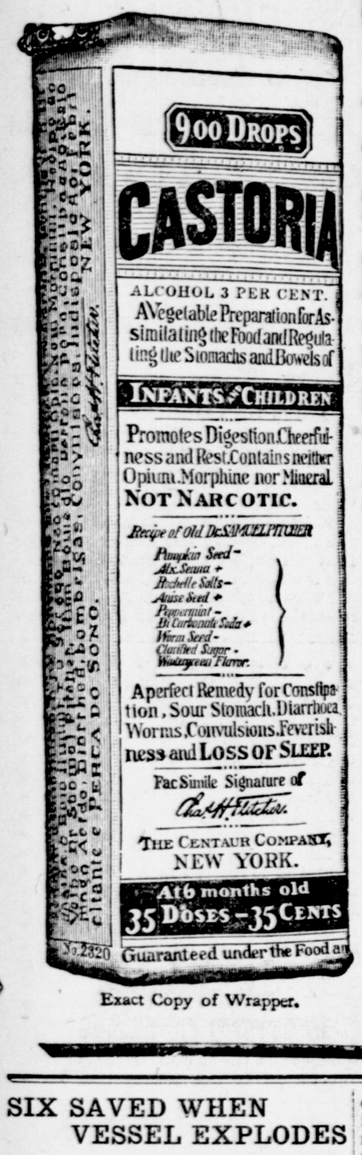

Mrs. Thaw exhibited a letter written to her by Thaw, which, she said, was waiting for her when she and her daughter arrived at the Hotel Gotham. It referred to her prospective visit today.

Shortly after Supt. Kieb began his inquiry into Thaw's escape, a telegram arrived at the the asylum for Thaw, sent from New York, telling him his mother and sister would visit him today. It was signed "M. S. T.," Mrs. Thaw's initials.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. Frederick D. Rogers, of Chicago, Ill., says: I have found Fletcher's Castoria very useful in the treatment of children's complaints.

Dr. William C. Bloomer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: In my practice I am glad to recommend your Castoria, knowing it is perfectly harmless and always satisfactory.

Dr. E. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

PASS LA CROSSE ON PANAMA WALK

Andrew and Robert Sullivan to Hike from Minneapolis to the Isthmus

With 7,680 miles still ahead of them, Albert and Robert Sullivan, two St. Paul brothers, yesterday passed through here on a long distance walk, that if completed will make Weston's record look like a Sunday afternoon stroll. The young men are walking under the auspices of the Commercial club of Minneapolis, from that city to Panama.

The club under which they are walking is paying their expenses and offering them $1,000 apiece and fare for the return trip. Theyoung men are cousins of Senator George H. Sullivan, well known Minnesota legislator.

Leaving Minneapolis, the young men took the tracks of the Milwaukee railroad down the river. They intend to follow the tracks to Chicago, and from that point hit for St. Louis and to the Gulf of Mexico. They are traveling twenty-five miles daily, walking eight hours.

Before leaving Minneapolis, the young men had a talk with Edward Payson Weston, and also Mr. and Mrs. Lee Earl, who are walking across the country, Mr. Weston was surprised at the great distance they intended to cover, but encouraged them in the project.

HORSE LEAPS FERRY BABY NEAR DEATH

GRAND RAPIDS, Wis., Aug. 18.—Mrs. James Damek and two children of New Rome, Adams county, had a remarkable escape from drowning yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Damek and chiudren, one aged 7 and the other a 3 months old baby, had just started home from Nekoosa in their country wagon when the horse took fright and ran directly for the ferry over the Wisconsin river at Nekoosa.

The horse plunged onto the waiting ferry and ran off at the opposite end into the river.

The ferryman succeeded in rescuing Mrs. Damek and the next ones on the scene rescued the 7 year old girl, but the swift current carried the baby beyond the reach of the shore rescuers.

The baby's clothes acted as a float and kept the child above water, while being carried swiftly toward the dam a few hundred feet below.

Clam Bradley, a plumber, saw the child floating in he river and plunged in to rescue her. His strength was nearly exhausted when he reached the child, but he succeeded in keeping her above water until both were rescued by Marshall Billings and Sydney Brooks, who put out from the shore in a row boat.

DEATH FAKER DIES IN CELL

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 18.—In pursuit of an alleged matrimonial scheme, W. F. Bennett, aged 42, 834 Sycamore street, "died" seven times during the past month, according to United States Marshall Vebber.

In the county jail yesterday, twenty minutes after having been arrested on a charge of using the mails to defraud, Bennett expired in his cell from heart failure.

According to the federal officials it was Bennett's scheme to write letters to women in all parts of the country, telling them of a big fruit farm which he owned in Florida.

After the women had become interested he would write that he was financially embarrassed for the moment and needed money for railroad fare to his fruit farm. After he had received it, the woman would be sent a letter saying that Bennett had been taken ill suddenly on the train and had died before physicians could reach him.

STABS FAMILY—SUICIDES

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—After stabbing his wife with a penknife and slashing his eight year old daughter, Anna, with a razor, William Sinda, 30, a cabinet maker, 2536 Cortland street, today cut his own throat and died enroute to a hospital.

The tragedy occurred after a quarrel at the breakfast table. Three other children watched their father attack their mother and sister, and ran screaming into the street.

Neighbors found Mrs. Sinda writhing on the floor, semi-conscious. She will recover. The girl was not seriously injured.

10 HURT BY AUTOS

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 18.—Ten persons were injured, two probably fatally, in three automobile accidents here yesterday. Seven were hurt when a street car struck their automobile.

Modern research has brought to our industries at a marvelous rate not only new compounds, but even new elements. Of the fifty metallic elements now known only seven were in use 2,000 years ago, and until 100 years ago the rate of addition was less than one metal for each two centuries. Within the last twenty-five years about fourteen metals have been added to commercial use, an addition at more than one hundredfold the previous rate.

THE TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

AS THE BOAT SAILED

By IZOLA FORRESTER

(Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

She had planned the whole thing for two weeks before. Yet now, as the steamer swung out into the Hudson river ,and the long, deep whistles sounded she would have given anything to be back on the long crowded pier.

Every one had crowded out to the rails. It was almost deserted in the little writing cabin. She slipped into a shadowy corner settee and covered her face with her hands.

Her father would find the letter she had left, perhaps he had it even now. It had only given him a glimpse of her trouble. She could not bear to break in on his happiness. Each human being held the right to personal happiness, but it had come as a terrible blow, his marriage with Miss Rose Naylor.

All summer she had seen them together and thought it merely the old general's longing for companionship; for the friendship of a clever, interesting woman. And then he had told her only the week before.

"Tess, child, I'm bringing home a new mother to you. You've had the responsibility of the house and me too long as it is."

Tess had held her breath, staring up at him in shocked surprise. Her mother had been dead seven years, and she was twenty-two now. The general hardly seemed to realize her mood.

"But, father, listen," she pleaded. "It's hardly six months since you told me to send Ralph away because you could not spare me."

"Nonsense, my dear. That was merely an excuse. He was not a suitable husband for you."

"He was the man I love. Suppose I say now I do not think Rose Naylor a suitable woman to take my mother's place—"

"Be silent," roared the general, bringing down his fist with a smashing blow on the library table, but Tess had plunged ahead, remembering Ralph's white, angry face that last night in the same room.

"You did," she retorted hotly. "You simply stepped in and broke my romance up as you would a twig that brushed your path. You never even considered me, father. It was just yourself. You needed me here to look after the house for you, and take mother's place at receptions and dinners for your friends. I never cared for any other man except Ralph, and mother liked him even as a boy. Why, he was the first sweetheart I ever had."

"Bosh," said the general. "I don't want to hear a word about it."

"Of course you don't. It's supposed to be dead and buried. But it isn't. I love him now, and I'm going away to find him and tell him so."

She had heard him call to her, but had never turned back. And she had never gone down to meals afterward, or spoken to him. Alone in her own room, she had packed her things, discarding only what was absolutely necessary. Last of all she had deleberately stolen down stairs and collected all of her mother's pictures. Not a single one should he have. She kissed each one with passionate tenderness and the day the general went to be married she had left her home.

Once in town she had hunted up Ralph. He was in South America, they told her down at the newspaper office where he had worked. He had gone down to look after some business interests in Argentina. How long ago? Since March. It was August now. Yet she had followed that clew and had finally heard of him. He was up in the mountains in Ecuador, having worked north. And he had been very ill with a long native fever. She had money of her own, left her by her mother. She had drawn every cent from the bank, and had taken the night boat for New work. One letter she had sent back home, telling her father where she was going. It was her last farewell to him. She had wished him all happiness.

And suddenly somebody sat down beside her. Before she could raise her head arms were folded about her and her hair was presed back from her flushed face.

"Childie, childie, how could you do this?" gasped the general. "Upon my soul, I've been half insane. Ralph, speak to her."

Tess opened her eyes. Over her bent Ralph's dear familiar face, and next him Rose Naylor's no, it was Rose Lancaster now, Mrs. Gerald Lancaster. Tess's lips closed more firmly, and she caught her breath in a quick sob, as she met the serene, gray eyes of the woman who had taken her place in her father's heart.

"Tess, dear," Ralph said eagerly, reaching for both her hands, "I landed in Boston the day you left. You see, I came up for Cousin Rose's wedding. It seemed so perfectly corking for her to marry your father when I had asked her to win him over so he would be willing for us to marry, don't you see?"

"You sly dog, you," chuckled the general.

"Are, you really Ralph's cousin?" asked Tess, with swift contrition. "Oh, I'm so sorry I've been bitter and —and rude to you. Won't you forgive me?"

"I understand just how you felt, Tess." Rose knelt beside her, her arms around the girl's waist. "If you had only let me see you I could have explained everything. I thought when Ralph reached us, it would come out all right."

"But you're all here, and we're going straight to South America," Tess exclaimed, helplessly. "I was running away to you, Ralph; just think of it."

"I think it was awfully dear and thoughtful of you," said Ralph, fervently. "But, dear, we've got a tug chasing us, and I've ordered your baggage all fished out of the hold, and we're going down a tidy little ladder and turn right back up the river. There's to be a wedding at 4 sharp. Isn't that right, general?"

But the general and Rose had moved leisurely out on deck, and Ralph reached hungrily for the runaway.

"Somebody'll see you," she whispered.

"They're welcome," Ralph returned. "You owe me six months of happiness, and I'm just beginning."

SIX SAVED WHEN VESSEL EXPLODES

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 18.—After turning turtle in a heavy sea two and a half miles south of the Milwaukee harbor entrance, Saturday night, the ninety-seven ton steamer Reliance, commanded by Capt. William Krumer, was blown to bits and sank when its boilers exploded.

Capt. Krumer, his two young sons, and the crew of three were saved by the Goodrich steamer, Chicago, commanded by Capt. Daniel J. McGarity.

The end of the little steamer was as startling as it was sudden. It started to list at 6:12 o'clock and three minutes later nothing but small bits of wreckage were floating on the stormy waters of Lake Michigan. Capt. Krumer, who had remained on the boat, after ordering the crew and his young sons into the lifeboat, was picked up, from a piece of wreckage, to which he clung after the explosion of the boilers had reduced the vessel to matchwood.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 18.--Hysterically clasping her 3 year old baby, who had been struck by a street car as she watched him playing in the street, Mrs. Mary Scuzek ran eight blocks yesterday in search of a physician. A crowd of 500 persons followed her. She passed several doctors' offices without seeing them. The child died in her arms.

$100,000 OF WHISKY BURNS.

Antiquity of Beer.

Beer was brewed and drunk by the Egyptians, the exact date of its origin being lost in the remote ages. But that it was enjoyed in the flourishing times of Egypt is settled beyond controversy. So far as can be learned, the materials from which beer was then made were substantially the same as today.

Daddy's Bedtime Story— Why the Frogs Like The Water

OUTSIDE a frog was croaking to one of its fellows. "What does the frog say, daddy?" Jack inquired.

"Oh, Dinah says the frog is telling everybody that there is going to be rain. Do you believe that, daddy?" Evelyn asked.

"I should not wish to contradict Dinah," daddy laughed.

"We wouldn't tell her, you know," the children promised.

"Well, that would be thoughtful of you," daddy said. "And, while I hardly know what Mr. Froggie is saying out there, I will tell you a story I have read which shows us why there are frogs.

"Once upon a time, in the days when the old world was young and when the Greeks believed that gods and goddesses often left their beautiful homes in the sky and walked about the earth, some countrymen were at work by the side of a beautiful lake.

"As they worked a woman came through the woods carrying two little children in her arms. She was covered with dust as though she had come a long way. The countrymen stared at her rudely, for they took her to be a tramp.

"She did not seem to notice the men, but laid her babies on the grass and then leaned over the lake to drink.

"One of the countrymen spoke to his fellows. 'Let's chase her away. We don't want any tramps about here,' he very likely said.

"Before she could bathe her lips in the water the countrymen bawled to her to go away and let the water alone.

"She answered very gently, saying that she was very tired and thirsty, for she had traveled far that day.

"They had no pity for her, however, and told her she must move on at once.

"'Water,' she replied, 'is for all and free as the air and sunshine.'

"She again kneeled down to drink, but instantly the countrymen jumped into the water and began muddying it with their feet.

"Then the stranger rose. She grew suddenly tall and beautiful, and the countrymen were frightened by the anger that flashed in her eyes.

"Raising her hands to heaven, she cried, 'Avenge us, oh, great ones who live on high!'

"And then, turning to the now silent and frightened countrymen, she said sternly:

"'Since you love the water so well, may you live there forever.'

"Instantly her tormenters were changed into frogs and jumped, croaking into the muddy lake, while the great goddess Latona, whom they had insulted, picked up her little ones and vanished as strangely as she had come."

LONDON SOCIETY WONDERS WHETHER LORD ROCKSAVAGE AND YOUNG BRIDE WILL GET ALONG TOGETHER; THEY'RE SO UNLIKE

The recent marriage in London of Miss Sybil Sassoon, who inherited millions from her father, the late Sir Edward Sassoon, and Lord Rocksavage has given rise in London society to the question whether they can live happily together. The bride is a Jew; Lord Rocksavage a gentile. Furthermore, no two people could be more unlike in tastes. She is everything that is cultivated and refined, of strong artistic and intellectual tastes, while he is absorbed in sport and has not the slightest interest in art or literature.

One of London's smartest young debutantes this year was Adelaide Montgomerie, the youngest daughter of Sir Samuel Montgomerie. Her mother is the eldest daughter of the late Earl of Edlinton.

SO LA FOLLETTE HAS INSISTED

It must be admitted freely, even by the most partisan democrats when they are candid, that the present tariff bill is far from a perfect thing. It must also be admitted that there is no consistent principle running through it—neither free trade, nor tariff for revenue, nor protection. This passage took place between the republican senator from Washington and the democratic senator from Maine, concerning an item, gallic acid, on which the duties of the Payne-Aldrich bill are actually increased by the Wilson-Underwood bill:

Mr. Jones—Is that increase particularly for revenue or a compensatory rate?

Mr. Johnson—For revenue, and also to equalize the conditions and equalize the cost of conversion.

Similar admissions have been made again and again by the democrats. All this is no argument against the bill. The present democratic effort is, on the whole, to reduce the tariff downward and at the same time do as little injustice as possible to the complex and artificial structure which has been built up during twenty years of abnormal protection. It is more and more apparent that tariff making should be done by a board of experts who would give all their time to it and continue the work through a period of years. This will have to come. But when it does come it will be enabled to begin, thanks to the present democratic effort, on a reasonable basis. Most of the republican advocacy of a tariff board during the past few years was meant to delay revision downward, to preserve the high republican standards as long as possible, and spread the work of revision downward over a series of years.—Collier's.

CUTTING EXPRESS CHARGES IS FAIR

The slash in express company rates made by the interstate commerce commission will be good for the people in general and at the same time probably not ruinous to the express companies. The latter have been enjoying huge profits for years and even the radical cuts announced doubtless will still enable them to keep in the field. If the new rates should prove confiscatory they can be put back at their former figure, the changes, it is especially pointed out, being experimental in their nature.

The important point is that the express and parcel post charges now are much nearer equality than they were before. With the abolition of the special stamp formerly necessary for mailing packages the parcel post is bound to rise in popularity and now that rates are about even it is likely to prove a really serious competitor to the private companies.

It is just posible that the gradual extension of the government business will convince the public at large that the package carying field is as rightfully within the state jurisdiction as is the carriage of mail. No one today would think of advocating the transfer of letters by private companies. Perhaps in a few years we will come to consider the private handling of packages as similarly out of place. Certainly the parcel post, in spite of the irksome regulations and technicalities with which it has been burdened has proved immensely popular and there is no present sign that this popularity is not likely to grow.

With the success of the experiment and the sharp cut in express rates which has been ordered it is easy to understand now why the express companies for so many years stood so solidly against the innovation. John Wannamaker was about right when he named these companies as the only reasons why parcel post, long a success in Europe, was not established here. The years have proved Wannamaker right in his earnest advocacy of the innovation, not the least of the benefits being the strong suspicion raised that packages can be carried at much lower rates than the express magnates ever dreamed of offering voluntarily.

A FLAGRANT ABUSE IN TARIFF BILL

The Public, a publication which under the editorship of Lewis F. Post, has come to be recognized for its vision and force, and which since Mr. Post's resignation to accept a cabinet portfolio has continued in the old lines, reads the democratic leaders in the senate a deserved lecture upon one of the gross inconsistencies of the measure. Says The Public:

"When an illustration of a protective duty is needed thath most clearly shows the absurdity and injustice of protectionism, what is usually selected? Why a duty on bananas, a duty so preposterous and outrageous that hitherto no standpat protectionist has had the courage to advocate it. The democraic party, being ostensibly opposed to protection, it would not seem probable that a banana duty would be proposed, even by one of the hypocritical, treacherous protectionists who plague the party with their presence. But, astounding as it may seem, such a duty has been incorporated in the pending tariff bill by Senator Simmons of the senate finance committee, and other standpatters masquerading as democrats. It is incredible that they did not know that they were putting in a duty that would be most effective in descrediting the party in which they claim membership. Of course there are other and far more serious objections to such a duty. At a time when the increased cost of living is a serious problem, it will tend to still further increase it. It will add to the great burden of taxation already placed on the poor, and will tend to make the banana business in the United States a stronger monopoly that it already is. The protectionism of democrats seems more outrageous and extreme than that of their republican confederates."

Why a duty on bananas? They are not a United States product. They are, of all the fruits, the most nutritious and of the greatest use to the less well-to-do of our citizens. Here is a tax upon a necessity with nothing of monopoly more tightly upon a staple food product.

The United States exported $40,000,000 worth of automobiles during the last fiscal year and Rockefeller exported most of the gasoline with which to run them.

Quips and Cranks and Wanton Wiles

A Wise Fool.

There was a half-witted youth in Bridgetown to whom the neighboring farmers liked to offer a penny and a nickel.

Gathered about him in a circle on market day, the farmers, one after another, would say:

"Now, which'll yer have, Peter Here's a cent—here's a nickel—take yer choice."

And fool Peter would invariably choose the cent rather than the nickel, and the farmers before such incredible foolishness would roar with laughter, double in two and slap their legs noisily with their brown hands.

"Peter," a man said one day to the lunatic, "why is it that you always take the cent instead of the nickel"

Peter grinned a very cunning grin.

"Suppose I took the nickel," said he, "would I ever get a chance to take another one?"

A Victim of the Language.

Gen. Frederick D. Grant said to his servant one morning, "James, I have left my mess boots out. I want them soled."

"Yes, sir," the servant answered.

The general, dressing for dinner that night, said again: "I suppose, James, that you did as I told you about those boots"

James laid 35 cents on the bureau.

"Yes, sir," said he, "and this is all I could get for them, though the corporal who bought them said he'd have given half a dollar if pay day hadn't been so far off."

Too Forward.

"By jove, I had a narrow escape yesterday!"

"Really! How?"

"Well, four of us were lunching together, and, of course—you know how one has to do on that sort of occasion—we each insisted on stumping up and paying the bill."

"Yes," remarked his friend, "but what about that narrow escape?"

"That's just it. For a minute or two it looked very much as if I'd overplayed the game and the other three really were going to leave me with that bill to pay."—Answers.

Clever Deduction.

The train stopped for a few moments and the passengers looked out.

"Everybody in this town seems to look perky and contented," remarked Dr. Watson.

"The town evidently has a winning baseball team," deduced Sherlock Holmes.

Dodged the Doctor.

This incident is related of a Scotch doctor, new to the gun, who adventured upon a day's rabbit shooting:

Chased by the ferrets, bunny was a rather quick moving target, and the medico was not meeting with the success he anticipated.

"Hang it all, man," he exclaimed to the keeper who accompanied him, "these beasts are too quick for me."

"Aye, doctor," the pawky keeper replied, "but ye surely didna expect them toe lie still like yer patients till ye kill them."

The Engineer a Cook.

The sweet young thing was being shown through the locomotive works.

"What is that thing?" she asked, pointing with her dainty parasol.

"That," answered the guide, "is an engine boiler."

She was an up to date young lady and at once became interested. "And why do they boil engines?" she inquired again.

"To make the engine tender," politely replied the resourceful guide.

Light burning of underbrush to remove forest litter had been practiced in India, with the idea that it improves conditions for teak growing. Now after long investigations forest officials there say that the fires are harmful, that full fire protection must be extended everywhere and that to be really effective this protection must be continuous.

RESULTS THAT REMAIN

Are Appreciated by La Crosse People.

Thousands who suffer from backache and kidney complaint have tried one remedy after another, finding only temporary benefit. This is discouraging, but there is one kidney medicine that has earned a reputation for lasting results and there is plenty of proof of its merit right here in La Crosse.

Here is the testimony of one who used Doan's Kidney Pills years ago, and now makes her testimony even stronger.

Mrs. Mary Scales, 1712 Market St., La Crosse, Wis., says: "I still consider Doan's Kidney Pills the best kidney medicine on the market. I have previously endorsed them through the local papers and at this time gladly do so again, for they gave me permanent benefit. There was lameness across my loins and I had a tired, listless feeling. I was not certain that my kidneys were weak, but when I read of the cures Doan's Kidney Pills were making in similar cases, I decided to try them. I got a supply at Erhart's Drug Store and the result of their use was gratifying. The backache and lameness was removed and the other symptoms of kidney complaint that had annoyed me went away."

How to Get Rid of Eczema

An Effective Method that Kills the Germs and Makes New Skin.

Even a Microscope Won't Find a Blemish After S. S. S. Gets Through.

If you bruise your hand, you will notice that a scab forms, and when it falls off, new skin has formed. Did salve do it? No! Skin is the same as muscle, bone, sinew, ligament. All are made from the blood, from the materials that your stomach and intestines convert from food into what we call blood. And this blood circulates in the myriad of tiny blood vessels in the skin. Start from your stomach, where blood materials begin, and it won't be long before you are free of eczema. Use S. S. S. for a short time, and not only will eczema disappear, but the entire blood will be renewed.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy, judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 189 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Beware of any attempt to sell you something "just as good."

CLAYTON AMBITIOUS TO BE A SENATOR?

Representative Clayton.

Among those most prominently mentioned as the successor of Senator Johnston of Alabama is Representative Clayton, chairman of the house judiciary committee. It is expected that Representative Hobson will try for the senatorship, running on a woman suffrage, prohibition ticket. The conservatives are looking for the strongest man to oppose him, and are said to look most favorably upon Clayton. He has represented his district in congress since 1897.

THE RED BUTTON

A MYSTERY STORY OF NEW YORK — By Will Irwin

Copyright, The Bobbs-Merrill Company

"My name is Margarita Perez. I am thirty-five years old, and unmarried. I was born in the Island of Trinidad, where I lived all my life. Juan Perez is my half-brother, ten years younger than I. Our father was the same, but my mother was an Englishwoman, my brother's mother was Spanish. My father was a cocoa grower. He was very rich once, but he lost much of his money. When he died, four years ago, he left my brother the plantations, and me a very small income and the family jewels—they were worth twenty thousand dollars of your money. My brother came into his property when he was twenty-one. He managed poorly; and then he had bad luck. By last summer, he was so near failure that there seemed to be only one way out—for me to sell my jewels and give him the money. I wanted to do that, but he wouldn't let me make the sacrifice. He said that he had committed his follies himself, and he would suffer for himself. He saw one more chance to save us. We had rich relatives in Caracas, on the Venezuelan mainland. He went there to see if they would help. Caracas is not very far, but it is a long journey on the kind of boats and trains that run in the Indies and South America. He was gone three or four weeks. He sent me only one letter; and it was so discouraging that I felt sure there was no hope.

"Just before that letter arrived, and after Juan left for Caracas, Captain John H. Hanska came to Port of Spain from Antwerp. Although my father was Spanish, we lived in the English fashion; I was free to meet men. I met Captain Hanska and fell in love with him."

(Here the police stenographer cut corners. In this last phrase he condensed many divagations and evasions on the part of the witness; indeed, Inspector Martin McGee, expert inquisitor that he was, spent five minutes in bringing out that simple declaration—and the next.)

"He said that he loved me. I believed him. It was all very quick. Within a week we were secretly engaged. I supposed that he was an American army officer on special duty. And after we were betrothed, I told him about our troubles and my wish to help Juan. My mind was made up by that time—I would sell my jewels before my brother returned to prevent me. I told this to Captain Hanska. He offered to help. He said that he must go to England the next week, and in England he could sell them to much better advantage than in Port of Spain. I agreed—I trusted him absolutely, you see. Then he told me that he could dispose of them more easily, and for more money, if he appeared to be the owner. So I made out and signed a bill of sale, describing in detail every piece to the last ring and pin, and transferring them absolutely to him. Now I know what a foolish thing I did. For that made the jewels his property in law, as surely as though he had bought them from me.

"The steamer in which he planned to sail for England—he told me—was due to leave Port of Spain on Wednesday morning. On Monday night he visited me and took away the jewels. He said that he wanted to register them in advance with the purser. He promised to come again on Tuesday night. He did not appear. I learned the next morning that he had left on Tuesday for New York. I started for the pier from which the Southampton steamer sails, in order to see if there was any mistake. On the way, I met a friend of the family who had been waiting to warn me. He had found out about Captain Hanska's career in Caracas. He proved to me that the Captain was an adventurer and almost a professional gambler. Then I understood. I told no one about the jewels until Juan came back; but I wrote a letter to Captain Hanska in care of the steamship company. Somehow, it reached him. He answered it with a cold letter, claiming the jewels absolutely and stating that he bought them from me.

"That arrived just after Juan came back from Caracas. Juan had not succeeded in raising money. The plantation went into bankruptcy. That is the matter with my eyes. They had always been troublesome. But now I gave them a real disease by weeping over the loss of our property."

(Here, as Miss Estrilla made her statement, she spoke broken phrases about another loss. The police questioned her minutely to discover what she meant. Upon finding that she referred to the loss of a whole heart's love, they dismissed this part of her statement as immaterial, and did not enter it upon the record.)

"I told Juan, of course. He was very kind to me. He did not reproach me. But we could do nothing, he found. Captain Hanska had landed in New York—the passenger lists showed that. It was certain that he had smuggled the jewels into the United States without paying duty; and we confirmed that afterward. Juan has found out a great deal since then about jewel smuggling. The agents of your government watch the big purchases in Europe, and notify the customhouse to look out for them. But an irregular purchase at a remote point like Port of Spain—it is easy for an expert to smuggle such jewels through the customs. We decided at last to go to the United States and see if we could get them back—if not the jewels, at least the bill of sale—because if the diamonds were in our possession with the bill of sale destroyed, we could prove by half the people of Port of Spain that they were ours. We were safe in stealing them from him—perfestly safe. For he would not dare complain to the New York police, since if he claimed them publicly, we could have him arrested for smuggling.

Wife of New York Governor, Who Would Take Blame for Speculation in Campaign Funds

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Mrs. William Sulzer, wife of the governor who has been impeached for using campaign fundsfor speculation in Wall street, has offered to take all the blame on herself, and has thus brought about a remarkable situation. Friends of her say that for many years she has handled the governor's funds because he knew little about business affairs. She had power to indorse his checks. She is said to have taken campaign checks for many thousands of dollars and used them in Wall street operations about the time of the election last fall. The governor, her friends say, knew nothing about this till recently

RAID FASHIONABLE CAFE

DENVER, Aug. 18.—Police raided the Villa Montiflori, a fashionable cafe, and after-theater gathering places here early today, and arrested 18 couples, including several prominent men and women. Several women fainted and there was a panic with some of their escorts attempted escape. "Blackmail," exclaimed Frank Lehner, the proprietor, when he saw the police.

Forest of Natural Columns.

There is in Bulgaria a group of natural columns much like the Giant's causeway in Ireland. On the edge of a plateau in the open country rises this forest of natural columns, which gives the impression of an antique ruin. The columns, which are about fifteen to twenty feet high, are absolutely cylindrical, and they are often as much as three feet thick. The stratification of the rock resembles joints and vertical erosion due to rain has formed Doric flutings.

TO ORGRANIZE CLUSTER

ORDER OF BARNACLES WILL BE REPRESENTED AT M. V. P. B. A. REGATTA AT KEOKUK

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 18.—One of the most unique features of the Mississippi valley races at Keokuk, Iowa, August 26, 27 and 28, will be the establishment of a local "cluster" of the Order of Barnacles among Mississippi valley boatmen visiting the regatta. The "team" from Milwaukee will gt to Keokuk to conduct the initiation and will be accompanied by a special car of "Barnacles" from Chicago.

The Order of Barnacles is a new secret society to which only motor boat "bugs" are eligible. The local lodges are known as "clusters" and Milwaukee and Chicago both have strong organizations which include the leading boat "bugs" of both cities. There's a whole lot of mystery about the Barnacles, and once a candidate shows the white feather he never gets another chance to join. Commodore William Hale Thompson of Chicago is the national president.

The Barnacles will conduct their initiation on the 27th, the second day of the racing, and will conclude it with a banquet.

Commodire James A. Pugh, whose racer Disturber III will be a feature at Keokuk, is one of the original "Barnacles" and Adam Weckler of the same city, has even named his new 20 foot racing boat after the new order.

NELSONS VICTORS IN FIRST FRAME

Get Six Runs at Outset and Summits Are Unable to Get By Lead

Bunched hits in the first inning, when they scored all their runs, enabled the Nelson Clothing company baseball team to defeat the Summits 6 to 3 at Copeland Park yesterday afternoon in a seven round battle. The game was called in the seventh because of darkness.

Taylor, on the slab for the Nelsons, was in splendid form and but four bingles were made off his delivery. Langhurst and Fitsky, who did the twirling for the Summits, also allowed only a quartet of safeties but wildness was partly responsible for the Nelsons' six runs in the first inning.

A rally by the Summits in the fourth stanza netted them three runs but the six run lead which their opponents got in the opening round proved too much to overcome and the fourth was the only frame in which Taylor would let the Summits cross the rubber.

Features of th egame were a wonderful one handed stop of a long fly, which looked like a sure triple, by Miller, the Nelsons' left fielder, a double by Miller which brought in three tallies as the bases were full at the time, and a three cushion swat by Williams of the Summits with one man on the paths.

Taylor had five strikeouts to his credit while Fitsky whiffed three batters. Longhurst passed four men, while Fitsky walked one and Taylor handed out free transportation to three. The score:

Nelsons 6000000	6	4	4
Summits 0003000	3	4	3

Batteries: Taylor and Jorgeson; Langhurst, Fitsky and Johnson.

The Cardinals and the Park Store teams opposed each other in the opening game of the afternoon and the lattear club was victorious over the Cardinals by a 1 to 1 count.

Mistakes are but the by-products of experience.

"DEAD MAN" IN CAR ONLY DRUNK

There was excitement in police circles yesterday afternoon when a telephone call was received at No. 2 station to the effect that there was a dead man lying in an old car at Camp 20, a few blocks from the north side depot, on the Milwaukee road.

Patrolman Dan Deneen, County Physician Robert E. Flynn, together with Chief Webber and Detective Joseph McGrath, who came up from the south side in the department automobile, hurried to the scene in the boiling sun. It was not long before the rumor spread that a dead man had been found and a large crowd braved the sizzling rays of the sun to follow to the place where the "dead man" was.

Perspiring freely from the hot ride, the police and county physician arrived at Camp 20 where the alleged dead man was found. An examination proved that he was not dead but merely intoxicated and was sound asleep. His name was Pete Kepler and his residence is at Dubuque. He was taken into custody by the police and taken to No. 2 station, but he was released.

CHUG!!!

R. JAMES HARDY, who was generally addressed as Jimmie, had bought a motor boat to ply up and down the Sandy river for pleasure. After 5 o'clock in the afternoon the bank of which he was cashier had no further call on his services until 9 the next morning.

Jimmie was in love with Violet Wilder. He knew it and she knew it, and the whole town knew it, but there was no engagement.

He had purchased that motor boat that the engagement might be a fact. Miss Violet had said that it would be so nice to go spinning up and down the river just as the sun went down and the chickens prepared to go to roost.

She talked of the mocking birds in the willows, the whippoorwills amid the grape vines and the solemn hush of evening, and Jimmie bought the boat.

He knew that it would go chug! chug! chug! but between the chugs he would work in his little speech and be made a happy man. There was no reason on earth why he shouldn't get off that speech in Mr. Wilbur's parlor, but he bent to the romance of the thing.

When you buy a motor boat there is a book of instructions to enable you to run it down the river, up the river or across the lake. If you only read you can't go wrong. Men who have never husked corn or pulled turnips can go right at it and run a motor boat inside of 10 minutes.

Jimmie Hardy read two pages of it, felt pity for those who had to read further, and then invited Miss Wilder to chug! chug! chug! gently down the sandy stream of time.

It was the romantic hour. The Sandy was placid. The sun was going down in a blaze of glory with at least $5 in cash or $7 on the installment plan. River—boat—lovely girl!—young man—romance!

The boat moved out as gracefully as a swan. It floated as softly as a goose. It left a wake behind it like a duck. So, for 200 feet!

Miss Violet had just exclaimed "delicious!" for the third time when the chug ceased. When that stops there is something wrong. Jimmie began to tinker.

While he tinkered the boat ran on a sandbar and canted over and shipped a little water. It was only enough to wet Miss Wilder's feet.

Ten minutes tinkering got the chug to working and the boat was backed off. Then she went ahead in the handsomest manner for another 200 feet, when she decided to rest again.

More tinkering and not the notes of the whippoorwill, but the notes of tinkering and of Jimmie Hardy swearing under his breath.

Suddenly the chug commenced again and the voyage down to the willows was resumed. A girl with wet feet and a mosquito buzzing around her ear has to be a good girl to exclaim: "Perfectly charming!" And that is what Miss Violet said.

She was a little ahead of time, however. The chug vanished as if chopped off with an ax. Jimmie didn't tinker any more just then. He observed that there were crafts that wanted to rest now and then, and that they would drift the rest of the way. They would hear the whippoorwill sooner and better if the chug was not in evidence.

His assertion was never combatted. No girl with wet feet ever combats until driven to the dead-line.

There was just a little incident before the willows was reached. The floating craft tried to float up on the back of a log and shipped a few more quarts of water. Jimmie bailed it out with his straw hat and said some crafts had that habit.

The boat was run into the willows and held there. Neither the whippoorwills nor the mocking birds nor the bobolinks came. An owl solemnly hooted. An owl might just as well utter a jolly hoot as a dismal one, but he never does.

The gnats came and the mosquitoes came, and there was silence in the boat. It was a little discouraging for Jimmie, but at last he drew a long breath and began:

"Miss Wilder, you must be aware—you must have seen—"

"Yes, I have seen you tinkering with the boat and I am wondering how we shall ever get home!"

"Why—why—the boat's all right. I forgot to tell you that I must have turned the wrong switches. As I was preparing to—"

"There's a mud-turtle trying to climb into the boat!" answered the girl as she shifted her position.

Jimmie jumped up to defend her. He felt that he could meet all the mud-turtles in the United States. The boat tipped and some of the Sandy came in. She also floated away from the willows and down stream.

The Sandy was bailed back into itself, and Miss Violet tried to keep the irony out of her voice as he said:

"You may take me home now, please. I have just remembered that I must attend a childrens party this evening."

Jimmie tried to start up the chug. No go.

"Mr. Hardy, why don't we go?"

"In a very little time, Miss Wilder. I am looking for the right switches. Have you noticed what a holy calm there is on the river tonight? Just as soon as I find the right switches, you know."

"Then land me on the bank and I will walk home!" she exclaimed five minutes later.

"I—I think I have found the chug at last."

But he hadn't. The demand was repeated, and with the push-pole he drove the boat to the bank.

It was a landing in the woods. He would land, too, of course, but he must make fast the boat first. When he had done this, Miss Wilder had disappeared. He shouted and ran here and there, but she had vanished.

He stood irresolute for a moment, and then plunged into the dark forest. The heroic in a man comes out at such times, no matter whether he is a money counter or a Texas cowboy.

The forest was interspersed with glades. Just as Jimmie burst into one of these glades he beheld a human form on the ground, and another form almost ran against it! It growled. It was not so sure of hovering around, gnashed its teeth. It reached out its claws! He called out and dashed forward. "Stand here and I will meet it, he called out and dashed forward. "Stand here and I will meet it, tle, and the certain one rose up and staggered toward him, crying out "O, Jimmie, if you should be killed

THE BOAT MOVED AS GRACEFULLY AS A SWAN—FOR 200 FEET.

"Oh, Mr. Hardy—Jimmie!"

"And is this you, Miss Wilder—Violet!"

"The—the bear—the animal! I it comes!

"Because I couldn't make it run, dear."

"And why, O, why, couldn't you?"

"Didn't find the right switches, I guess. Now let me advance and face this danger."

"I will face it, too, Jimmie, if you should be clawed to death—"

Hand in hand they advanced. Foot by foot the unknown retreated. Jimmie Hardy had never been a soldier, but he had read "Sheridan's Ride," and he realized that the proper thing to do when one has his enemy on the run is to follow im up.

He followed and dragged the girl along until the unknown was backed up against a rail fence. There was a pause lasting 30 seconds, and then an old cow gave a bellow and broke through the lines and escaped.

"Mr. Hardy, what does this mean?" demanded Miss Wilder with sudden dignity.

"Why, it was only a cow. Violet, let me take this opportunity to say—"

"But, sir, you can't run a motor boat?"

"No!"

"And why, sir—I want to know why!"

"Because, dear, I had it on my mind to ask you to be my wife, and my condition was nonelectrical. I know it all the time, but didnt dare say so."

"Well, you've finally said so, and now help me over the fence and home and when your condition gets electrical enough to bring some chugs out of that boat we'll talk about another call in the gloaming."

BUTCHER'S PICNIC IS WELL ATTENDED

Pettibone Park Scene of Successful Annual Arfair Given by Meat-men

Foreseeing one of the hottest days of the summer, a goodly number of the populace of La Crosse, youngsters, their mothers and dads, deserted their homes yesterday and spent the hot hours with the La Crosse retail butchers and their families at Pettibone park, on their third annual picnic.

Besides the usual array of basket lunches, refreshments in liquid form, served by the ladies, and sandwiches that only true butchers can make, were in evidence, adding a zest to the occasion.

According to the general sentiment among the butchers the committee on entertainments more than did their duty, making the pleasures of the day such as will be remembered until another year will bring the butchers out again.

The feature of the program of games was a baseball game between the north side Cutups and the south side Slicers. The Cutups succeeded in showing the south side boys that they were some ball players, by a score of 6 to 1. Following was the lineup of the two teams:

A long list of contests were held for which prizes were awarded.

One of the butchers missed a roll of sausage from his sandwich stand. They were running short and sausage was in demand. After accusing several small boys who were loitering near the stand the owners started on a systematic search, which ended when two pet terriers owned by L. W. Meyer and J. W. Murray were seen scrapping for the dainty bit.

PROMISES PROBE OF THAW ESCAPE

Superintendent of Prisons Hints at Bribery in Delivery of the Murderer

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 18.—A sweeping investigation of the escape of Harry K. Thaw from Matteawan was ordered today by Superintendent of Prisons Riley. In addition he planned to leave here about 3 o'clock this afternoon personally to examine all of the officials of the asylum. A report that bribery had been used to free Thaw attracted most of the attention of the superintendent.

"It seems very strange to me that Thaw was able to get away in the manner he did," said the superintendent. "I am making no charge that money was used. But it is somewhat peculiar that events turned out as they have. The customary reward has been offered for his apprehension."

Riley said he did not care to discuss any steps that might be taken for the return of Thaw to custody. That was a legal matter for the legal officials of the state. He said that he had reported the escape to both Governor Sulzer and Lieutenant Governor Glynn.

Riley was in his office when a messenter from Governor Sulzer whispered to him and he went immediately to the executive chamber. It was reported that friends of Sulzer believed the superintendent of prisons, who is a personal friend and appointee of the elected governor had made a great tactical error in recognizing Glynn by reporting to him.

"I want to say this," said Riley, "that Thaw's attorneys were in conference with him in the asylum on Friday afternoon. They had their interview in private under an order of the supreme court. Thaw was the only person having this privilege. Other patients see their attorneys and everyone else in the presence of an agent of the asylum."

LOCAL EVANGELIST HELD FOR ASSAULT

George C. Childress, "Billy Sunday II," Held on Serious Charge at Wadena

Out on $2,000 bail, George Childress, well known in La Crosse as "Billy Sunday the second," is held at Wadena, Minn., charged with assault on a thirteen year old girl, according to a message received by the police here. Childress will have a hearing within the next few days.

Childress came to La Crosse about four years ago, shortly after which he was married. He was prominent among church workers here. Although not a licensed minister Childress led congregations of small churches out of the city.

Last summer he conducted street meetings here and was greatly interested in mission work. Childress was a powerful speaker, and during a series of street meetings won for himself his title of "Billy Sunday the second," because his style much resembled that of the noted "baseball evangelist."

Early this summer Childress left for Wadena to superintend the work on a farm near there belonging to his wife. Friends of Childress here who learned that he had been arrested, the scouting the story.

WON'T DELIVER MEAT

TRENTON, Mo., Aug. 18.—The old market basket was dug out of the attic today by the housewives of Trenton. Once again they will see the meat they buy before it is delivered at the back door. Trenton butchers have discontinued the delivery of meats because of soaring wholesale prices. It was either that or boost the price to the "ultimate consumer." It is rumored they feared a boycott and cut out the free delivery to have their business

MODISH COSTUMES HAVE PEG-TOP OUTLINES

Whoever the man was who first assumed the prerogative of creating models for woman, he secured for himself a long line of followers. Sometimes they have been condemned, sometimes mildly approved, but still more frequently enthusiastically admired by the favored sex. A recent body of these august personages has set the stamp of approval on many charming features of our present fashions, and suggeted a variety of new ideas which promise to be equally popular.

At the recent convention of the National Ladies' Tailors' and Dressmakers' association, the great majority favored the continuation of the narrow skirt; so it will be with us during the fall and winter. They fixed its width at one yard, or, at most, a yard and a quarter, and with true American independence, and regardless of pious anathemas, decreed that the slash at the hem was "perfectly proper." So, it, too, will remain, but it is limited to a depth of eight inches. The wide, girdle effect, such as illustrated in the first figure, will finish the garment at the waist, and the deep cuff or band will form an effective trimming for the lower hem. The charming frock below was developed in white surah silk. Drapery in both waist and skirt is an attractive detain. Narrow panel of silk embroidery, in shades of gold, royal blue and white, extends down the entire front of the costume. Gobelin blue girdle, finished at the ends by beaded ornaments, is knotted carelessly at the left side, the ends hanging to the knee. For dinner, reception or matinee, the frock is equally attractive either in summer or winter.

Among other approved modes are the peg top and leg o' mutton skirts, which, in their general silhouette, closely resemble one another. The former has box pleats introduced at the waist. At the back and front these are draped into panels, giving a broad effect over the hips and very narrow lines about the lower edge. The leg o' muttin skirt has Watteau pleats at the hips. The lower narrow hem is finished with stitched, smartly turned up cuff, an innovation in the style of finishing a woman's skirt that much resemble the smart turn a dandy gives the hem of his trousers. The substitute for this cuff will be the band. We are assured that this band will be very smart, particularly on the Balkan dress.

Suit coats, made of brocaded eponge, will be worn with plain skirts. They will have sloping shoulder lines and kimona sleeves, and range in length from thirty-six to forty-one inches. Evening coats of charmeuse, plain, or brocaded, for the present, and of plush and wool cloth, with moire finish for fall and winter will be effectively draped. The drawn-in appearance at the hem continues in favor. The approved length is from forty-one to forty-five inches. Embroidery, fur, velvet and velour will be the fashionable trimmings.

In all the furore raised about extravagance and immodesty in the present styles, no one has thought to make favorable comment on the charming simplicity and unparalleled comfort of the present-day blouses. To be sure, the materials used, muslin, mousseline, chiffon and crepe, are frequently very diaphanous, but this sheerness is conducive to comfort on torrid days, and the ribbons, rosebuds and laces to be seen underneath are very dainty and charming. With their delicate, ruffled fichus and attractively shaped necks filled in with tulle or chiffon, no mothod of development could be more appealing or essentially feminine, and, too, this low neck fashion never produces headache. To be sure, there are other waists much less fragile and dainty which are equally good style. The practical shirt waists have lost not a whit in favor, and, whether made of wash silk, either plain or striped, of flannel, linen or percale, are always very popular. At all times, the waist, whether of filmy or firm material, should be fresh and dainty, thus aiding in the difficult task of looking and keeping cool in hot weather.

Whether sightseeing abroad or in our own country, shepherd's check, in black and white, will always hold a prominent place in correct traveling attire. It is equaly important this season to the smart outfit of the stay-a-home. I may be bought in soft flexible silk or serge, and in either large or small check. As a bodice accompaniment, the traveler hastening from place to place should choose a waist of dark silk, or of crepe of any desired shade, as this can be readily washed, and requires no ironing.

How appropriate, then, for all practical purposes is the attractive waist and skirt of the second illustration. The waist is developed in white crepe. Collar of lace and deep yoke extending over the shoulders are pleasing features. The skirt is of black and white plaid in large check. A fashionable wide girdle of black satin, brought loosely twice about the waist, finishes the costume, which is sufficiently smart for business, street or travel.

Figure Two.

An apt example of the way our ideas shape themselves to the changes in fashion is evidenced in the cut-leather belts of a contrasting color with the costume. Although still much favored, gay ribbons have not the exclusive right of encircling milady's waist. But, a short time ago, leather belts of contrasting color were considered 'too fancy" by the woman of really good taste, and, too, it was not the mode to "break the lines" with a belt, girdle or sash in color. Now all this is changed. Stunning belts of suede in Chinese blue, dull and moss green, bronze, lapis lazuli and apricot are seen with many of the smartest costumes. They are not drawn taut, as formerly, but allowed to come down loosely below the waist, in similar fashion to the ribbon girdles worn. They naturally crush a little. In this way the effect of supplenes which should characterize the figure is obtained. The blouse droops over them slightly, both back and front.

the two cars drew up on the further side of the road, opposite the gate and stood still, their engines throbbing.

As Barnum stepped aside for the milkman to drive inside the grounds he heard the gravel crunch beneath Thaw's feet and, looking up, saw the madman flash past him for one of the waiting cars. With a shout Barnum started in pursuit, but a flying leap landed Thaw safe within the car. The wheels were slowly turning before the keeper had fairly reached the roadway. They were throwing up a cloud of dust before he had gone twenty-five feet.

Though Thaw was reported seen in half the cities, towns and villages of New England, according to the messages received by the police, the slayer of Stanford White, who made a melodramatic escape from the Matteawan State Hospital for the Criminal Insane that is the envy and desperate of all moving picture people, today, was lost to those seeking him.

The letter that Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw received from Harry Thaw today was posted last midnight at a New York city postal sub-station, proving either that Thaw or somebody acting for him was in New York last night. The latter, scrawled with a lead pencil, as made public by Mrs. Thaw this afternoon, said:

"All well. Shall take a rest before coming to Elmhurst, as I might be asked for interviews and do not want to refuse. Yet do not care to make any statement. Hope M. and G. (Mrs. Margaret Carnegie, his sister, and George Carnegie, brother-in-law) arrived safe and yiu will go home together. H. K. T."

Mrs. Thaw said she probably would leave New York this afternoon, going to Cresson, Pa.

Elmhurst, mentioned in Thaw's letter to his mother is the name of the Thaw cottage at Cresson, where Mrs. Thaw said she was going. Cresson is in Cambria county, Pa., north of Johnstown.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, before her matinee this afternoon, said that she was firmly convinced that her husband did not escape from Matteawan yesterday morning as reported, but really got out Saturday evening. She refused to explain her remark.

A policeman was stationed at the Hotel Brevoort to guard the dancer and he accompanied her to the theater for the matinee, remaining at the stage entrance all the time Mrs. Thaw was inside.

"Are you afraid of Thaw?" she was asked.

"Yes, I am," she said, "but I am not half as scared as are his mother and other relatives."

May Have Sailed

The authorities hold to the theory that Thaw made for some point on Long Island Sound and boarded an ocean going yacht that either would take him to Europe or transfer him to a liner at sea.

Since District Attorney Charles Whitman and other officials unanimously agree that Thaw cannot be extradited and therefore is immune from arrest anywhere without the borders of the state of New York, the chiefs of police and sheriffs are puzled to know what they should do with Thaw if they should catch him. Despite the legal opinions that Thaw cannot be brought back to New York if found, the general alarm for his apprehension, issued yesterday by Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty as soon as Thaw's escape was telephoned from the asylum, and sent broadcast to police departments all over the United States, had not been rescinded today.

On the chance the yacht seen off South Norwalk, Conn., yesterday might have taken away Thaw and those who aided him escaped, the authorities today kept up a ceaseless wireless inquiry, asking liners and coastwise vessels for information regarding a yacht with one yellow funnel and unusually large cabin, the most striking features of the yacht seen at South Norwalk.

The rigid inquiry within the asylum begun by Superintendent Kieb and Deputy District Attorney Mack, almost as soon as the officials returned from their short and fruitless search of the flying automobiles that carried Thaw and his helpers away, was continued today and every attache of the institution will be mercilessly grilled. According to Superintendent Kieb, Harold H. Barnum, the guard whom Thaw shoved aside at the gate, is a dull witted fellow whose story that he was taken completely by surprise, the authorities are inclined to believe, and if Thaw's escape were an "inside job" there were others and not Barnum in the plot.

Chose Lucky Time

That Thaw chose an auspicious time for his escape the authorities reluctantly admit, scarcely able to conceal their admiration for the cleverness with which the plot was planned and executed. With twin governors claiming the executive authority of the state, Thaw's advisers evidently calculated, say the asylum authorities that even if extradition were sought for Thaw there would be such an argument as to who is governor that Thaw could get beyond reach while the courts were threshing out the problem.

Superintendent Kieb made a search of Thaw's room after the escape and is said to have found several road maps of New England, as well as maps of sea routes.

Taking Time

DANBURY, Conn., Aug. 18.—Wherever Harry K. Thaw is today, he is probably taking his time and traveling leisurely.

Thaw is not speeding at "eighty miles an hour" to escape pursuers. He knew he was safe as soon as he crossed the Connecticut state line. When he stopped here to buy a cigar at a hotel yesterday morning he was not in a hurry.

Many people here think Thaw probably is enjoying a pleasant trip over the "ideal tour"—the great auto course through New England. There is little reason to place credence in the story that he boarded a yacht, according to those who saw him here. It was perfectly evident that Thaw had studied the law and knew that he could not be extradited.

The big high powered machine in which he escaped from Matteawan doubtless made record time as long as it was in New York state, but once across the line, it slowed down. Thaw and his companions were taking no chances of high speed through Connecticut on a Sunday when the roads were thick with automobiles.

Spotted by Traveler

When they stopped at the hotel here, they walked without any sign of excitement, and attracted little attention. All wore goggles and looked no different from hundreds of other autoists. One traveling man who was about to leave the hotel to catch a train said to the clerk:

"By George, that looks like Harry Thaw."

No one was surprised or paid any attention to this remark at the time. It is said that he has been out for automobile trips with guards at various times and as a matter of fact it is doubtful if there would have been any excitement if Thaw had admitted his identity.

The main feature made apparent here was the fact that Thaw and his friends showed no signs whatever of being in a hurry.

The story that Harry Thaw boarded a yacht at South Norwalk, Conn., yesterday afternoon was exploded today by Robert T. Fowler, a carpet manufacturer, owner of the yacht Kathmar II, which was the name of the yacht in the South Norwalk stary. He said that he was cruising in the sound yesterday and put in at South Norwalk, but he knew nothing about the escape of Thaw until he returned to New York last night.

Warrants for Aides

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Warrants were issued this afternoon by Justice Morcahuser for the five men who aided Harry Thaw to escape from Matteawan yesterday, in the names of the men who registered at the Holland hotel as Thomas Flood, Eugene Duffy, Richard O'Keefe, Roger Thompson and Richard J. Butler.

On the action of District Attorney Conger, the court today ordered H. Barnum, the guard who was pushed aside at the gate through which Thaw fled, remanded to jail on charges of bribery and with neglecting to perform his duty as a public officer.

WRECK KILLS CREW

NEVADA, Mo., Aug. 18.—The Katy limited, northbound, was wrecked at 9:20 a. m. today while crossing a switch one mile west of here. The engine, baggage, mail car and three coaches turned over. Fireman Wilder and Engineer James of Sedalia are dead and thirty passengers hurt.

Rain has nothing on dry weather when it comes to slamming the just and unjust with considerable impartiality.

AFTER THIRD GAME

With light hearts after their double victory of yesterday the La Crosse players lined up on time for their battle at League park this afternoon with Virginia. On account of Manager Lizzette having to go to St. Paul on business, Second Baseman Grogan will temporarily be the manager.

Batteries for today are Rhodes and Bramel for Virginia and Niedenfurer and Hruska for La Crosse.

Charles Weigent, La Crosse shortstop, is back in the game today. Thomas, who has laid off for a few days, is back in his old position in left field. Thomas has been bought by the St. Paul team of the American association.

SMOKY CITY WOULD WELCOME THAW

Believed Pittsburg Police Wolud Arrest Former Resident Reluctantly

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 18.—Harry K. Thaw would be warmly received should he return to Pittsburg. Not only would he be welcomed back to the city by a host of friends, but there is probably not a detective or police official in the city who would willingly take any hand in recapturing the escaped former coke man or in aiding the New York authorities to get him back.

That became evident today when Detective Roger O'Mara said he believed Thaw would be free from interference here and when Chief of County Detectives Charles Donnelly stated he thinks Thaw is sane and would have been liberated long ago had he not been a man of wealth and prominence. O'Meara, who is head of a private detective agency, and the guardian of Thaw, laughed at a report that private detectives had been engaged to watch the railroad stations and to shadow Thaw, should he come here.

SCORES SUFFRAGETTES

SENATOR TILLMAN MAKES SENSATIONAL SPEECH ATTACKING SUFFRAGE AND DIVORCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—That Maury I. Diggs and Drew Caminetti would have been shot down like dogs had their crime been committed in the south and that the fathers of the girls they had ruined would have been promptly acquitted of the killing, was the sensational declaration of Senator Tillman of South Carolina in an anti-suffrage and anti-divorce speech to the senate today. He declared that the easy divorce laws in the west had enabled Diggs and Caminetti to induce their victims to leave home with them.

"It appears to me," he said, "that the relation between divorce and votes for women, if not one of couse and effect, is at least one of mutual acceleration. I know the demand for equal suffrage is growing too fast for old fogies like me to stop it, except possibly in the south and New England; where conservativism is more strongly entrenched than in the rest of the country. But I scarcely believe that the goodness and usefulness of woman varies invariably as the extent of her participation in politics. I believe women will improve politics but ultimately politics will destroy her. When good women can no longer be found, the doom of the republic is near."

GANG ATTACKS GIRL

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Miss Jessie Bukonus, 19, was rescued early today from a gang of men, who knocked her escort unconscious, dragged her into a vanant lot on the south side and partially disrobed her. Two policemen who heard the girl's screams took into custody two suspects. Anthony Navitska, 21, the girl's escort, was badly beaten and is in a serious condition.

WELSH IS HURT

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 18.—Backers of the Welsh-Ritchie fight scheduled for Labor Day, said today they hoped to arrange for the mill. As the matter stands at present a postponement is likely because of an injury to one of his hands by Welsh while training.

TYPHOON KILLS 150

HONG KONG, Aug. 18.—One hundred and fifty persons perished today in a typhoon that swept Macaro. Numerous junks were wrecked, houses were swept away and the sea wall collapsed.

GOTHAM PRESS IS BITTER IN COMMENT

New York newspaper comment on Thaw escape:

Times: What the rich Thaw family could not effect by a succession of legal proceedings, what it was unable to do by bribery of the state officials, it has now accomplished by force.

Tribune: With the escape of Thaw the scandal is complete. The public needs no more proof that the murderer with money is safe.

Herald: Scandals in our state institutions have been so swiftly following each other that literally they "on one another's heels do tread," but the latest may well cause the most serious thought. The state is without a governor, and, in sooth, it also seems to be without much law or order.

Sun: People have often wondered why with his masterly pecuniary arguments and the easy collusion of inside and outside friends, he has not taken leg ball before. What cafe is he in? Whom will he kill next?

World: There has never before been so shameless a devotion of great wealth to degrade justice on behalf of a worthless degenerate as in this case. It is not alone a demoralized state government which we have. It is a demoralizing state government, as this case shows, and no state institution can hope altogether to escape the consequences.

American: It may be only a coincidence, the escape of Harry K. Thaw from the Matteawan state asylum for the criminal insane, at a time when the government of the state is hopelessly demoralized. But such an incident, and more like it, may be expected.

"EVERYMAN" IS NOW IN MOVIES

Famous Old Morality Play Will e Presented at the Majestic

"Everyman," the famous old English morality play that will be shown in movies at the Majestic theater two days, Aug. 19 and 20, is an extraordinary reel.

The theme of Everyman is that of universal mortality. The play begins with a sort of prologue introducing the characters of Everyman. Going on his way through the beautiful gardens of earth, Everyman is met with Death, who summons him to go on his last journey. He offers Death anything to be let off, but gets only the privilege of asking certain of his friends if they will go with him upon his journey.

He first accosts Fellowship, who has no mind, however, for anything but dicing and drinking. Then his kindred, who see no reason why they should follow their cousin Everyman on a way so weary. Everyman falters but Death appears and bids him on. Next he thinks of Riches and exclaims: "All my life I have loved Riches, perhaps he will help me now."

But Riches, greedy and of the world, will follow no man in such voyages.

Only Good Deeds is willing to follow Everyman but she says, "Fain would I help thee, but thy evil deeds have taken away my strength. Call Knowledge to help you."

Knowledge in turn leads him to Confession, and when he has shriven Everyman and given him the cloak of sorrow and penitence, Good Deeds is strong again and can walk, accompanied by Strength and Beauty.

Everyman sets out on the inevitable path to the tomb. Yet at the grave Strength and Beauty, too, take flight and abandon him as Fellowship, Kindred and Riches had done. Everyman grows feeblehearted at the desertion of the false friends, but Good Deeds stands by him even at the grave. Supported and chastened by Good Deeds, Everyman commends his spirit into the Lord's hands, and descends into the tomb.

Not Legal Says Goetel

Secretary Goetel of the railroad commission this afternoon informed City Attorney J. E. Higbee that the Wisconsin Railway, Light, and Power company had no authority to sell electric current in the city of La Crosse and requested that the action of the committee on their proposition be immediately transmitted to the commission.

The special water committee of the council decided, upon motion of Alderman P. W. Mahoney, to recommend to the council, at its special meeting Tuesday night, that the proposition of the W. R. L. & P. company be accepted and in the event it is illegal that the new proposition submitted by the Gas & Electric company be accepted.

That the W. R. L. & P. company may be enjoined from furnishing current to the city was intimated at the meeting this afternoon and D. S. Law, representing the concern, announced that his company would be willing to stand suit.

By some it is contended that the street car company has no desire to sell current here but the offer to furnish the city was made with a view of forcing the Gas & Electric company to buy current from their Hatfield plant instead of using their own at Menomonee Falls.

No, Maude, dear; it isn't altogether harmonious for a person who is blue blooded to have a red nose.

"HOOP-LA" WILL MAKE YOU AWFULLY GRACEFUL, INSISTS RUSSIAN DANCER

Mlle. Anna Pavlowa in "hoop-la" game.

Mlle. Anna Pavlowa, the very famous Russian dancer, says that hoop-la is the best exercise she knows for women who want to attain gracefulness and ease of carriage. Now nearing the end of her season in London, where she has made the game popular with aristocracy and nobility, Pavlowa says she will bring the hoop-la craze to America in October. In London Pavlowa has given hoop-la parties to the titled folk on the lawn of historic Ivy House. Hoop-la, which can be played by any number of people, consists in tossing and catching small hoops with sticks.

DECLARES HE WAS PROMISED A JOB

McMichaels Says He Was to Get Job if He Stood By McDermott

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—That he had been promised a job in the Washington city government if he "stuck by Representative McDermott" in testifying on the Mulhall charges, was asserted by I. H. McMichael before the house lobby investigating committee today. Attorney Easby-Smith, counsel for McDermott, subjected the witness to a rigid cross-examination. McMichael insisted that he had never told anybody he was being paid to corroborate Mulmall.

The attorney asked McMichael to explain how he gave Mulhall $75, from his mother's estate to go to Chicago to help McDermott in his 1912 spring primaries, when his mother did not die before the primaries.

Without hesitation, the witness explained that the money was put in the bank before his mother died, in his name with instructions not to touch it before she died.

McMichael denied that he ever said Mulhall was a "dope fiend;" he also denied that he had told McDermott Mulhall was a "diabolical liar."

MAJESTICS WIN OUT IN TWELVE INNINGS

Pitcher Saurs of the Majestic baseball club won his own game and brought to a finish a well played game at Midway yesterday when he soaked out a three base hit scoring Johnson with the run that gave the Majestics a 1 to 0 victory over Midway.

In addition to hitting in the pinch, Saurs twirled a great game, setting the idway club down with but one hit. The combbat was marked by light hitting on both sides as but four swats were made of which the Majestics secured three.

The winning run in the twelfth came when Johnson was passed and Saurs trippled, letting him cross the rubbr. Redman and Redman formed the battery for Midway while Saurs was on the mound with Johnson behind the bat for the Majestics.

TEACH ENGINEERING AT LOCAL NORMAL

Innovation In Way of First Two Years of Engineer's Course Installed Here Only

When the fall term opens at the normal school a new department will be added. Arrangements have been made for a two year engineering course. By an arrangement with the dean of the engineering department two years credit will be allowed for the work at the university and students who take the course here will be admitted as juniors at Madison. The local school is the only normal in the state which has been given the engineering course.

It has been felt for a long time that the engineering course was a much needed department here. Students who desire to take up this study will now be enabled to get the first two years of any engineering course practically as it is outlined in the college catalogue. The course will aid many young men who want to take up engineering but cannot go away to school.

The first two years' work in any engineering course is non-technical, but it aims to lay a broad general foundation for the last part, which is very technical.

In the past the normal school has not been equipped for this work and it was necessary to send many applicants away but the equnpment has been installed and all is now in readiness for the courses.

quard has but a few hours to live.

Members of the family and physicians are at a loss for an explanation of the cause. It is claimed that in picking the mushrooms Mr. Jansky may have made a mistake and plucked one or two of the deadly toadstools. Another theory is that the mushroms may have been bad and unfit for table use. The toadstool theory is in a measure substantiated by the time it took for the poison to work. Toadstol poison usually works about ten hours after they are eaten.

Mrs. Bartl Jansky is survived by her husband, who is a mason, and six children. The children are Mrs. E. C. Duncan, St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. Mary Kohn, Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. Joe J. Jansky, La Crosse, and Messrs. Joseph, Frank and Michael Jansky, also of this city.

The out-of-town relatives have been notified and are on their way here to attend the funeral, the arrangements for which will be made later.

UNION UNFAIR SAYS HAMMES

Painter Whose Shop is Boycotted Insists on Arbitration To Settle

That under the rules of the local painters' union he could not be a member, that the dispute is one for arbitration and that the treatment he is receiving from the union officials is unfair, are some of the claims made by C. E. Hammes in a statement to the press today.

Mr. Hammes is the contracting painter who threatened injunction against the painters' union to prevent alleged boycotting of his shop.

The painters' union still refuses to recogniz Hammes and no union men are working for him today.

Mr. Hammes' views on the matter are contained in the following signed statement:

"I was formerly a member of local Painters' union and remained such until March 1, 1913, about which time the master painters of this city organized. I then paid my dues in full to the painters' union as under their national constitution I could not belong to both. My joining the one was virtually a withdraway from the other. This was known to the union at that time for I received a notice asking me to appear before the union and explain why I joined the master painters. This I refused to do as I did not consider myself a member of the union. On April 1, 1913, and sometime after I left the union, I signed an agreement with the painters' union as a contracting painter and agreed to hire only union men which agreement was carried out by me to the letter. On August 13th a committee of the union called upon me demanding that I become reinstated in the union. I refused to do this on the ground that I belonged to the master painters and that membership in the two was inconsistent under the rules of the national union. They contended that as I employed under five men it was necessary under their local rules to join the local union. I denied that any such rule ever was adopted.

"Although the men working for me were willing to continue their work, they were ordered to quit by the committee of the union.

"My agreement with the union provides for the arbitration of disputes. I advised with several strong union men who advised me to submit the matter to arbitration. They said that I was right and would certainly win. This was also the advice of my attorney. But the committee of the union upon advice of their attorney absolutely refused to arbitrate.

"I desire to make this statement to remove any impression that I have been 'bucking' the unions. I have been a union man for a long time and have always employed union labor and am willing to do so now if the union will stick to its agreement to submit the matter under dispute to arbitration.

ONALASKA BEATS MELROSE 10 TO 2

Hitting the ball hard, Onalaska yesterday handed the elrose team a 10 to 2 beating when these two clubs met in the Onalaska field. Although elrose tried to strengthen its club by getting players from many of the surrounding towns including Pitcher Johnson of Black River Falls, they were outclassed by Onalaska.

Christopherson, who did the pitching for Onalaska, was in fine form and but six hits were made off him. On the other hand, Johnson, who started for Melrose, was knocked off the slab and Spence of La crosse finished the game, pitching good ball.

In the first round elrose scored a tally on two passes and an out from then until the ninth Christopherson had Melrose puzzled and they didn't cross the rubber again until the final stanza.

L. Gould, Onalaska center fielder, made the best play of the day and one of the best throws ever seen on the Onalaska field when he caught a runner at third by a wonderful peg to the far corner.

Score:	R	H	E
Onalaska	10	10	1
Melrose	2	6	6

Batteries — Christopherson and Comeau; Johnson, Spence and Cotton.

"HEROES" FEAR STRIKERS

CHICAGO, Aug. 18—Officers of the Perry centennial celebration committee today were using every device within their knowledge to instil courage into 200 badly frightened sailors and save the "Commodore Perry victory" spectral from disaster.

The battle was not staged yesterday and may not go on late this afternoon. The 200 "heroes" refused to fight because they feared that 300 striking "heroes" who went out Saturday, would meet them after the battle and rout them with their fists.

The striking "supers" were out in force again today on the lake front, threatening to 'beat up" and "sailor" who went to battle for only $1.50 per day.

GLORY.

Chicago Grain Review

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—After a weak opening today, corn began a steady advance that brought September to 75⅝c at noon, breaking all previous high records by ¾c and cash corn prices made correspinding jumps.

Bears sought to break the corn prices today on reports that the Kansas drought had been smashed. The bulls met this argument with the admitted fact that the corn damage is beyond repair and began pushing prices up when the weather man reported that rains over the drought afflicted territory were not as general as was reported and that high temperatures were returning to the middle west.

Wheat was ¼c lower at the outset with the Liverpool cable and turned higher with the strength in corn, and at noon was a fraction above the closing figures of Saturday.

Oats was weak at the start but prices went upward with the advance in corn and registered gains of 1c for each month during the forenoon.

Provisions turned higher today with higher hog prices.

Ambition.

Uncle Horace (who is something of a sage and philosopher)—My boy, it is time for you to think seriously of the kind of future you intend to map out for yourself. To sum it up in a word, what epitaph are you anxious to have engraved upon your tombstone? Nephew (just beginning his career)—"He Got His Share."—London Telegraph.

FACE YOUR TROUBLES.

Face your troubles and fight on bravely till you master them. The escape from all the fret and fever and hurry and unrest of the world is to be achieved not by running away from the difficulties, but by deepening the life.

RACE IS FEATURE OF CELEBRATION

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Seven hydroplanes, the biggest field that ever started in an event of that kind, were to get away at 4 p. m. today in the first heats of a race for cups and prizes aggregating a value of $25,000. The races, under the auspices of the Associated Yacht and Power Boat clubs of America, is to be run as one of the features of the Perry centennial celebration here.

Barnacle, the Chicago entry, owned by Adam Weckler, made from 40 to 50 miles an hour in practice today and is the favorite. Baby Reliance, the eastern entry, and Oregon Kid, regarded as the Pacific coast champion, are thought to be too slow to win.

NEW RECORD WILL NOT BE ALLOWED

The electric timing instrument was not used.

VIRGINIA BEATEN TWICE BY COLTS

Lizzette's Men Win First in Tenth, 6 to 5, when Dreis Steals Home; Second Easier, 6 to 3

KRAMER STOPS VISITORS RALLY

Called to Rescue in Last Round of Final Battle with Bases Full and Retires the Side

The Colts ran away with both ends of yesterday's double header, nosing out Shannon's Virginia club in the first battle, 6 to 5 in ten rounds while they had an easy time in getting a 6 to 3 verdict over the visitors in the last half of the bargain day attraction. Dreis won the opening game for La Crosse by pilfering home with the winning counter in the tenth. The second game was called in the last half of the fifth on account of darkness.

Heavy hitting was the feature of the first encounter and although the locals were outbatted, they played better all around baseball. The game was a seesaw affair until the fifth when the Colts evened things up by scoring three but there was no counting after that until the tenth when the Colts won out. It was in the first game that Hruska made the first home run seen on the local grounds for some time but it was a scratch as it would ordinarily have been a single. Greisch came in fast and tried to catch the sphere but he could barely reach it and as soon as he could stop and get back he couldn't find the ball in the grass until Hruska had made the circuit.

Five Twirlers Used

Lizzette used three twirlers in this battle and Sutton who came on in the fifth was the only one who was effective. Johnson started for Virginia and he was knocked out in the fifth after Hruska got his scratch circuit clout. Faeth came on then and the Colts tied the score and then won with him on the slab.

Virginia scored first in the third but Joe Safford put the Colts ahead by driving in two with a double in the local half. The visitors scored two in each of the next two rounds but La Crosse tied it up in the fifth. With one down, Safford pocked out his second double and he scored when Hruska made his four base clout. Faeth was called in and Kramer's hit, a wild pitch, an out and Breckenridge's double notted the count.

After the Colts had cut down a Virginia man at the pan in the tenth, they put across the winning tally themselves. Thomas was passed but was forced by Dreis who went ahead when DeRusha walked. Breyette missed Safford's bounder and the bases were full. With Hruska up, Dreis pilfered his way home and the game was over.

Sutton and Faeth went back on the slab for the second game but neither one finished. Niedenfeuer was substituted in the fourth, although Sutton had been going fine but Kramer was called to the rescue with the bases full and two down in the fifth.

Virginia Scores First

Virginia again got the jump when they tallied one in the third on Lampert's triple to left and Faeth's single. This lead didn't last long as the Colts bunched four swats for a trio of runs in their half. Breckenridge started with a double and after Sutton popped out, Thomas scored Breckenridge on a two sacker to right and he followed him across the pan on Dreis' safety to right, Dreis going to second on the throw home. The shortstop came in on DeRusha's safe poke to center.

Niedenfeuer helped Virginia to one in the fourth by passing Greisch who completed the circuit on Lampert's second three bagger. LaCrosse raised the total to six in their half on a walk, a single, a double and a sacrifice fly.

Kramer had to go in to subdue the visitors in the fifth when a pass and three singles scored one run and left the bases full with two gone. Mike was called in and the first man he had to face was Bramell, but Kramer made him soak a grounder to him and the game was over. Scores:

Saturday's Game

A pinch hit in the ninth inning of Saturday's battle would have won for La Crosse but the necessary swat was not there and Sutton was beaten out in a great pitchers' battle. Duluth winning by the close margin of 1 to 0. Rhoades opposed Sutton on the slab and the visitors made only four safeties to six for the Colts. Sutton deserved at least a tie score, for he twirled a great game. After the second frame Lary allowed Darby's bunch but one single.

Sutton, himself, was partly to blame for the defeat, however. It was his failure to reach first in time to take Lizette's toss on Brackett's bounder that let the ball roll away and gave the runner second. There were two gone at the time but Larry followed this up my making a wild pitch which hit in front of the rubber and let Brackett walk to third from where he registered on Sweeley's swat to right.

The Colts had a chance to break up the game in the ninth but neither Breckinridge nor Sutton were there in the pinch. Hruska was hit for a starter and Lizzette singled, both men advancing on Grogan's sacrifice. Breckenridge hit a grounder to Schreiber and was out while Sutton struck out and the runners were left on the bases.

JOHNSON TO ASK FOR BIG SALARY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Walter Johnson has made it known through letters to friends that he will demand $12,500 salary next season. The speed demon figures that he is of as much value to the Senators as Cobb is to the Tigers, and unless he gets the increase he says he will retire from baseball. At present Johnson draws $7,500.

WANT ZIM ON TRIP ROUND THE WORLD

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 18.—Heinie Zimmerman, Cub third sacker, and swatter of note, has been invited to make the round-the-world trip with the White Sox and Giants. Manager McGraw of the Giants, has found that his crew would be short a man or two when the tour was started and invited three or four other leaguers, including Zim to make the trip.

He Had Room.

"Dear me, Tom, you eat a good deal for a little fellow," remarked Uncle John to his nephew.

"I s'pect I aren't so little inside as I look outside," was Tom's ingenious answer.

LEARN TO BE GENIAL.

There are many people who excuse themselves from the little familiarities and kindnesses of life on the ground that they are not natural to them. These people say they are reserved by disposition and cannot be free and easy in meeting other people. But we can learn to row a boat or to write shorthand or to speak a new language. That unaffected simplicity of address which made Ruskin so approachable to child or man was the work of a long life's discipline.

Watching The Scoreboard

Keating wobbled a little but pulled hard when he felt himself slipping and pitched wonderful ball. In the eighth, with the bases congested and not a White Sox out to encourage him the Yank didn't allow a man to get across.

Hartzel, was the trouble maker nabbing one-third of the New York hits. He started the rally which tied the score in the fourth, then drove in the winning run in the twelfth.

Jim Thorpe fanned three times and drove out two home runs when the Giants took Long Branch into camp 12 to 7.

Speaker made several spectacular catches but Shotten, Brief and Pratt hit some Speaker couldn't very well handle, and the Browns won.

Engel and Willet staged a pitchers' battle until the seventh, when the strain told on Engel and he blew up. Detroit piled up six runs before Hughes could stop the breach. Engel passed six, four going to Bush.

The Naps played before the largest crowd ever in a ball park in Cleveland and expressed pleasure over the fact by pounding the Aehletics hard and holding them scoreless until the ninth when two men slipped around as the result of four singles.

A tool used to fight fires on the California forests combines a rake, spade and hoe. It is compact, so that it can be carried on horseback and weighs less than 5½ pounds.

FUCHSEL PITCHES A NO HIT GAME

Before a crowd of 500 fans at Rochester, yesterday, the fast W. B. U. Athletes shutout the strong Rochester semi-professional club, by the score of 5 to 0.

Outside of Fuchsel's pitching, the game was devoid of any feature plays. Rochester was absolutely helpless and had no chance whatever to get a score. Fuchsel pitched airtight ball all the way, not allowing the semblance of a hit, passing but two, and striking out 10 of the Rochester sluggers. Rochester got but one man to second base.

The Athletes pounded out enough runs in the first two innings to win, knocking Aberwald out of the box in the second. Luedtke, who succeeded him, pitched good ball, although he was a trifle unsteady. The score:

ANTAGONISM.

Do not be afraid of antagonism, but face it manfully and with intelligence. He that wrestles with us strengthens our nerves and sharpens our skill. Our antagonist is our helper. This conflict with difficulty makes us acquainted with our object and compels us to consider it in all its relations. It will not suffer us to be superficial. — Edmund Burke.
